3 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

OBAMA: FILTERED WATER IN FLINT IS SAFE FOR KIDS OVER 6 YEARS OLD

1 President Barack Obama visited Flint, Michigan, on Wednesday, a city struggling with the effects of lead-poisoned drinking water, as questions linger over whether his environmental regulators could have acted more urgently to address the crisis. He urged parents in Flint to ensure their children were tested for lead in their blood even as he sought to assure the community that filtered water in the city was safe for anyone over the age of 6. Obama said it would take more than two years to replace water pipes in the city.

US TO BOOST AIRPORT STAFFING TO MANAGE LONG SECURITY LINES

2 With airlines worried that long security lines may discourage summer travelers, the U.S. government said on Wednesday it will add airport staff and bomb-sniffing dogs and ramp up pre-screening enrollment efforts. The U.S. Transportation Security Administration will add officers at airports expected to have the highest passenger volumes, said Jeh Johnson, secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, in a statement on Wednesday. He added that he has asked Congress to approve additional funds to pay for officers' overtime and to meet "critical short-term needs."

FACEBOOK PAYS $10,000 TO 10-YEAR-OLD INSTAGRAM HACKER

3 Facebook has paid a $10,000 reward to a 10-year-old Finnish boy for finding a glitch in its picture sharing app Instagram. Jani, whose last name was not released for privacy reasons, is the youngest ever recipient of Facebook's "bug bounty," paid to users who find bugs or weaknesses in its platforms. "I wanted to see if Instagram's comment field could stand malicious code. Turns out it couldn't," Jani told Finland's Iltalehti newspaper. Facebook said the glitch was fixed in February and the reward was paid in March. Jani, who is still too young to have a Facebook or Instagram account of his own, said he learned coding from YouTube videos and found a way to delete user comments from Instagram accounts. "I could have deleted anyone's comments from there. Even Justin Bieber's," he told Iltalehti. He said he was thinking about a career in data security, but for now his plans include buying a new bike and a soccer ball with his reward money. REUTERS

At Barry's Shop, it's art, not food on the shelves

Allston building owned by Harvard will feature local artists' work on produce stands and clothing racks.

SPENCER BUELL
spencer.buell@metro.us

It has a checkout counter, a produce stand, bodega racks and even a pair of fully functional coin-operated kiddie rides.

But you won't find groceries at Barry's Shop, the pop-up store taking shape in a Harvard-owned building near Barry's Corner on Western Avenue in Allston this week. Instead, art made by dozens of local artists will line the shelves.

"We wanted to do a community engagement project that was around making art accessible and kind of mimicking the experience of going into a grocery store and looking at products," said Emily Isenberg, of the marketing firm Isenberg Projects, which is leading the effort focusing on an area they're calling Zone 3.

Art galleries can be stuffy, she said. A mock neighborhood store isn't.

In the produce-like section, rows of T-shirts, paintings, books, 'zines, crafts, buttons and other goodies will be arranged next to plastic fruits and vegetables. All of it is for sale.

On a giant pyramid of corrugated produce boxes sit hand-painted vintage radios. All of them were sourced from eBay, then curators asked artists to customize them for a project called "I'm in Love with the Radio On." It's a nod to Allston's history in radio broadcasting, Isenberg said.

Screen prints hang from hangers on a clothes rack. There's a table in one corner made out of a few dozen empty milk jugs.

In another corner, there's a converted "Fun Co-op" toy-vending machine filled with little plastic pods, which they plan to stuff with little pieces of original artwork. You put a quarter in and one pops out the bottom. It makes a clucking sound.

To complete the grocery store vibe: a pair of shopping carts painted blue, and one of those big wire cages filled with rubber balls.

"We wanted an element of playfulness to the entire experience," said Doscher Hobler, a producer with Isenberg Projects.

They also plan to host events, art classes and weekly "Drink and Draw" sessions. Those who participate will have the option of leaving their creations in the gallery and putting them up for sale.

All of this is happening at 267 Western Ave., which hosted the Eat Boutique gift pop-up over the 2015 holiday season, and has also been a venue for yoga classes.

Isenberg's mission isn't just to bring fun things to an empty building. The goal, she said, is to spread the word about the potential of the sleepy industrial corridor lined with auto body shops, and inject some of the offbeat Allston character into a swath of the city that is about to transition into campus-adjacent territory.

Harvard has been buying properties rapidly on the street over the past few years as it expands its footprint in the neighborhood. And developers are starting to swarm.

"There's a lot of change that's about to happen, and I think that the idea is there's ways to preserve some of what I think the spirit of Allston is," Isenberg said, adding, "At the end of the day, we're tasked with doing experience campaigns. We light the fuses and see what happens."

Across the street, Jack Clifford has watched with curiosity all the activity in the building, which a decade-and-a-half ago housed a dry cleaner.

Standing behind the bar at The Bus Stop Pub while catering to the dozen or so men there for a liquid lunch, he said he's optimistic about all the buzz coming out of the Harvard projects lately.

"It's fabulous," said Clifford, who has worked at the pub for 36 years. "It's been like a desolated area for the last 10 years since Harvard bought all the buildings and they've all been empty. At nighttime and even in the daytime there's nobody here. There's no such thing as walking traffic. It's just a dead area.

"The next five years are gonna be total changes here," he said.

Barry's Shop officially opens on Friday with a party featuring craft cocktails and a food truck.

Governor won't vote for Trump — or Clinton

Gov. Charlie Baker called the 2016 election cycle "troubling" after Republican front-runner Donald Trump became his party's likely nominee.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
@MetroMorgan
morgan.rousseau@metro.us

Gov. Charlie Baker said he won't vote for presumptive Republican nominee Donald Trump or Democrat front-runner Hillary Clinton while acknowledging that, "sure, it's odd" he won't vote for his own party.

Baker, a Republican, made the announcement Wednesday morning after releasing trout into Jamaica Pond, Boston.com reported. He said he couldn't remember not voting for the Republican presidential nominee, and called the situation "disappointing."

"I've already said before that I'm not going to vote for Mr. Trump and I sincerely doubt I'll be voting for Hillary Clinton," Baker told reporters.

Trump won in Indiana's primary on Tuesday night, forcing his main rival Ted Cruz to drop out of the race. On Monday, news broke that John Kasich was suspending his campaign, leaving Trump as the only GOP candidate still in the running.

Baker has previously expressed disapproval of Trump's stances, and his comments Wednesday were no different.

"The things he said about women and Muslims and religious freedom, I just can't support," he said. "At the same time, I do believe Secretary Clinton has a huge believability problem."

He went on to describe the race as one of the most "troubling election cycles across the board I've seen in my lifetime," Baker said.

Trump may not get Baker's vote in November, but he did get his congratulations: "I give him credit for it. He earned it fair and square, and congratulations to him."

Gov. Charlie Baker, left, tosses trout into Jamaica Pond on Wednesday morning in the annual spring restocking. About 800 rainbow trout, 50 brook trout, 50 brown trout and 100 tiger trout were reportedly brought from state hatcheries in Belchertown and Sandwich, where they were raised. The pond is open to fishermen with valid fishing licenses.

Scott Brown asks if Sen. Elizabeth Warren is 'drunk tweeting'

"Is she drunk tweeting now?"

That was the question posed by Scott Brown during an interview with Boston Herald Radio on Wednesday.

Brown was referencing a series of tweets released by Sen. Elizabeth Warren slamming Donald Trump after his Indiana GOP primary victory on Tuesday, Boston.com reported.

Warren's tweets called out the likely Republican presidential nominee's "toxic stew of hatred & insecurity."

In her Twitter tirade, Warren said Trump built his campaign on "racism, sexism and xenophobia" and that there's more enthusiasm for him "among the leaders of the KKK than leaders of the political party he now controls."

Brown called Warren's opinions "irrelevant" and a "continuation of her phoniness."

Warren beat Brown in 2012 to become the U.S. senator from Massachusetts.

In 2013, Brown came under scrutiny for his own Twitter faux pas. The former U.S. senator dismissed a rumor that he was drunk when he tweeted "Bqhatevwr" during a heated exchange with another Twitter user.

"Now allegedly I'm drunk Tweeting," Brown said in an interview with Fox 25 a month after the incident. "First of all I rarely drink. ... So, I guess no one has ever pocket-dialed or pocket-Tweeted before."

Massachusetts state chemist was high at work almost every day: Report

In the former chemist's own grand jury testimony, she claimed to have once smoked crack before a 2012 police inspection of the lab.

JASON NUCKOLLS
@MetroBOS

A report from the Boston attorney general's office alleges that a former Massachusetts state chemist was high on drugs while working, jeopardizing thousands of criminal cases in which she was involved.

Sonja Farak pleaded guilty in 2014 to charges including tampering with evidence and stealing, but the newly released report indicated that she may have been getting high at work nearly every day for eight years, WCVB reported.

"The information we gathered during the course of our investigation is disturbing and will no doubt have implications for many cases," a spokeswoman for Attorney General Maura Healey told the Boston Herald.

Investigators concluded that Farak testified in court while high on methamphetamines, ketamine, cocaine, LSD and other drugs from 2005 to 2013, the Associated Press reported.

In the former chemist's own grand jury testimony, she claimed to have once smoked crack before a 2012 police inspection of the Amherst lab where she worked, which has since been closed, the AP added.

Farak handled at least 10,000 drug samples while she was employed at the lab, WCVB reported, adding that it was not yet certain how many cases could have been affected by her drug use.

"Now that our investigation is substantially complete, the district attorneys, defense attorneys and the court will need to determine how best to proceed on each of these individual cases," the attorney general spokeswoman said in the Herald's report.

Young men targeted in seat belt ads

State highway officials Wednesday announced the launch of a campaign aimed at encouraging seat belt use in a population among the least likely to buckle up: men between the ages of 18 to 34.

"It's hard to get guys this age to wear their seat belts. Despite all the evidence, they feel invincible," Highway Safety Division Director Jeff Larason said in a statement. "By not wearing a seat belt, they are significantly increasing their chances of getting seriously injured or killed in a crash."

The campaign announcement said many men in the target age group drive pickup trucks and commercial vehicles, "which they mistakenly believe offer protection in a crash."

Running from May 9 to May 23, the campaign will include additional police enforcement of seat-belt laws as well as ads at gas station pumps, sports venues and on "television targeting male audiences." SHNS

Pig to be euthanized after farm attack injures two people

Authorities and owner decided animal's fate; pig will be tested for rabies.

JASON NUCKOLLS
@MetroBOS
letters@metro.us

Two people were hospitalized, one with life-threatening injuries, after a pig attacked them on a Massachusetts farm.

Townsend police and medical responders arrived at a farm at 188 Fitchburg Rd. around 5:52 p.m. Tuesday after a woman, 38, reported that a male pig attacked her, authorities said.

That victim, Shannon Hernandez, sustained lacerations to her body and was moved to an area hospital for treatment, WBZ reported.

Townsend authorities were called again to the farm at 7:29 p.m. because the same pig had attacked a man, police reported, adding that he received more serious injuries than the earlier victim.

The male victim, Jose Hernandez, 50, was being treated at UMass Memorial Medical Center for life-threatening injuries after the attack, according to WBZ.

Hernandez, describing the incident to NECN, said she's had the 5-year-old pig name Boss for three years. It apparently escaped from its stall before going after three female pigs.

"The girls come into heat every 21 days, so it's my responsibility to keep him quarantined enough that he's not going to break through. And he did, he broke through," she told NECN.

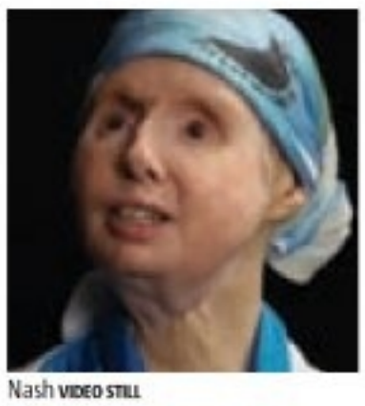
Her husband was attacked when he "picked up the water to clean it out and refill it," she added, and is now in stable condition.

Police said Wednesday afternoon that after conferring with local animal authorities and "the owner of the pig, the decision has been made to euthanize the animal and conduct a test for rabies."

Chimp attack victim's body rejecting face transplant after five years

A woman who received an experimental face transplant five years ago was reportedly back at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston on Wednesday, after doctors said her body is now rejecting the transplant.

Charla Nash told The Associated Press that her doctors decided to end an experimental drug treatment and put her back on her original medication used to prevent such rejections.



Nash VIDEO STILL

The Connecticut woman received the transplant after a chimpanzee attacked her in 2009.

Nash said she would appreciate any prayers and remains confident that her participation in the military-funded experiment will help others disfigured by war, according to the AP.

You can watch Nash speak about the attack in a video interview provided by the Humane Society on Metro.us.

Strictly a matter of gender identity

Boston, Philly, NYC adopted non-discrimination policies before access became part of culture wars.

America's culture wars have moved from the voting booth to the wedding chapel and, now, to the restroom, where the debate over transgender individuals' rights has states, cities, schools and businesses adopting non-discrimination policies.

That's been the approach taken in the Northeast — the Philadelphia School District, Massachusetts state lawmakers and New York City have all come out strongly in favor of transgenders using bathrooms of their gender identity.

But long before who was allowed to use restrooms became a presidential campaign issue, city halls and school districts in Boston, New York and Philadelphia had been quietly dealing with it. Their policies, according to spokespersons, complied with federal civil rights guidelines from the Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights (OCR) and respected the privacy of students, employees and citizens.

All without causing a backlash.

"This has become a front-page story, maybe because of the presidential races, but districts have been facing this for a long time without it becoming a big deal," said Mark Fitzgerald, a partner at Fox Rothschild, a firm that has worked with school districts across Pennsylvania and advised them on policies for transgender students.

"They seem to be using common sense and working with the kids and making sure they're comfortable," he said. "… You don't necessarily need a policy, but you need to be mindful of what the legal obligations are from such governing entities as the OCR."

Standard bathroom signs are differentiated for women and men. ISTOCK

Massachusetts lawmakers appear poised to pass a bill that would add discrimination protections for transgender people in public places such as parks and restaurants. Some of their colleagues have raised objections, however, citing concerns about privacy in bathrooms and locker rooms.

"I'm suggesting that the privacy rights of our children matter," Rep. James Lyons, a Republican, said at a hearing on the bill in October. "We ought to at least think about that."

Andrew Beckwith, president of the conservative Massachusetts Family Institute, has called the idea of a transgender woman using a women's bathroom "entirely inappropriate."

Gov. Charlie Baker hasn't taken a position on the bill, nor has he ruled out a veto. In April, though, he said in a statement that he "believes people should use the restroom facility they feel comfortable using."

The measure has support from a majority of legislators by a wide margin, as well as many top politicians, among them Boston Mayor Marty Walsh.

Walsh in 2015 opened two gender-neutral bathrooms in City Hall.

Boston this week became the fourth city in the nation to fly the white-pink-and-blue transgender pride flag. It has been flying on a pole in City Hall Plaza since Monday, and Walsh has pledged to keep it there until the bill passes.

A city ordinance in Boston already provides public accommodations protections to trans people within city limits.

Massachusetts schools have been required by law since 2011 to allow students to use the bathrooms and locker rooms that correspond with their gender identity. Among other measures, schools have been advised to provide transgender students access to private, gender-neutral bathrooms in places like nurses offices.

The new bill also has the support of the Massachusetts Association of Superintendents.

The Philadelphia School District allows its transgender students to use the bathroom of the gender they identify with under a general policy for multi-racial, -cultural, and -gender education, said spokesman Fernando Gallard.

In March, New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio signed an executive order requiring city agencies to guarantee that employees and the public will be given access to city single-sex facilities consistent with their gender identity.

RACE FOR THE WHITE HOUSE

Trump, last man standing in Republican White House race, now has to unify party

Republican National Committee Chairman Reince Priebus called Trump the party's presumptive nominee in a tweet on Tuesday night.

Donald Trump became the last man standing in the race for the Republican presidential nomination on Wednesday, as one after the other his sole remaining rivals, Ted Cruz and John Kasich, faded out of the picture.

Anointed the presumptive nominee after winning Indiana on Tuesday, the 69-year-old New York billionaire turned to a new phase in his campaign, planning to set up a vice presidential selection committee and stepping up efforts to seek unity with more Republicans.

But the wounds from a brutal primary battle were still raw among many Republican loyalists who simply cannot bear to support Trump because they worry he could spell disaster for the party in the Nov. 8 elections.

Kasich, the Ohio governor who stayed in the race in hopes of persuading Republicans to choose him as the nominee at a contested convention in July, has dropped out of the race now that a contested convention has been averted.

Trump has overcome sustained opposition from Republican rivals by using his star power to give voice to an anti-establishment movement. His supporters have been wildly enthusiastic about his "America First" platform, which has strayed far from some conservative bulwarks like free trade and military interventionism.

Trump has been a divisive GOP candiate. PHOTO ILLUSTRATION BY BILLY BECERRA, GETTY IMAGE

Trump's immediate challenge is to mend deep fissures within the Republican Party, easing tensions with party loyalists who have been appalled by his bombastic, bullying style, his denigrating comments about women and his proposals to build a wall on the border with Mexico and deport 11 million illegal immigrants.

In a series of Wednesday morning television interviews, Trump made clear he would not be looking to placate everyone after a tumultuous primary campaign in which many establishment Republicans rejected him and spawned Stop Trump and Never Trump movements.

"I am confident that I can unite much of it, some of it I don't want," Trump said on NBC's "Today" show. "Honestly, there are some people I really don't want. People will be voting for me. They're not voting for the party."

Trump believes more Republicans will support him when they consider the possibility of Hillary Clinton, favorite to be the Democratic nominee, being elected president, Trump spokeswoman Katrina Pierson said.

US, allies to do more to combat Islamic State: Carter

The defense secretary made the comment following talks in Germany with defense ministers and representatives from 11 other countries participating in the alliance.

U.S. Defense Secretary Ash Carter said on Wednesday that Washington and its allies had agreed to do more in their campaign to defeat Islamic State, but that more risks lay ahead.

Carter said the United States greatly regretted the death of a Navy SEAL in an attack by the jihadist group in northern Iraq on Tuesday, naming the man as Petty Officer First Class Charles Keating.

"These risks will continue ... but allowing ISIL safe haven would carry greater risk for us all," Carter added, using an acronym for Islamic State.

"We also agreed that all of our friends and allies across the counter-ISIL coalition can and must do more as well, both to confront ISIL in Iraq and Syria and its metastases elsewhere."

The talks included ministers from France, Britain and Germany and were planned well in advance of Tuesday's attack, in which Islamic State fighters blasted through Kurdish defenses and overran a town.

The elite serviceman was the third American to be killed in direct combat since the U.S.-led coalition launched a campaign in 2014 to "degrade and destroy" Islamic State, and is a measure of its deepening involvement in the conflict.

Offering new details about Keating's mission, Carter said the SEAL's job was to operate with Iraqi Kurdish peshmerga forces to train and assist them north of the city of Mosul.

"That part of the peshmerga front came under attack ... and they found themselves in a firefight," Carter said.

A U.S. military spokesman told reporters in a Pentagon briefing on Wednesday that the Navy SEAL was part of a "quick reaction force" that had been called in by American advisers.

In mid-April, the United States announced plans to send an additional 200 troops to Iraq and put them closer to the front lines of battle to advise Iraqi forces.

In late April, President Barack Obama announced he would send an additional 250 special operations forces to Syria, greatly expanding the U.S. presence on the ground there to help draw in more Syrian fighters to combat Islamic State.

Carter said the risks extended to pilots flying a U.S.-led campaign of daily air strikes. "Every time a pilot goes up in an airplane above Syria or Iraq they're at risk," he said.

The Islamist militants have been broadly retreating since December, when the Iraqi army recaptured Ramadi, the largest city in the western region. Last month, the Iraqi army retook the nearby region of Hit, pushing the militants further north along the Euphrates River valley.

But U.S. officials acknowledge that the military gains are not enough.

Teens abducted after prom but break free from captor

A 22-year-old man with a handgun kidnapped a teenage couple over the weekend in Southern California after their high school prom, but the abduction was foiled when the boy wrestled away the firearm and hit the suspect with it, police said on Wednesday.

Jared T. James appeared in court on Wednesday in Victorville, about 60 miles northeast of Los Angeles, to face charges of kidnapping and attempted murder, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Office said.

It was not immediately clear if James had entered a plea and an attorney for him could not be located.

James, who had known the 17-year-old girl since their childhood, approached her and her boyfriend on Saturday outside the boy's home in Victorville, the Sheriff's Office said in a statement.

He threatened the two teenagers, who had just returned from their high school prom, or formal dance, with the handgun and forced them into his Honda Accord, then drove to an isolated spot off a highway, the statement said.

It was then that the boy, a 17-year-old whose name has not been released, started to fight with James and the gun went off twice without hitting anyone.

The girl ran away while the boy grabbed the handgun and hit James with the weapon, eventually getting free himself, according to the statement.

Raging wildfire forces evacuation of 88K in Alberta, Canada, city

A raging wildfire that forced the evacuation of all 88,000 residents of the western Canadian city of Fort McMurray has destroyed 1,600 structures, ravaged one neighborhood, damaged others and halted incoming and outgoing commercial flights, authorities said on Wednesday.

"This is a nasty and dirty fire," Chief Darby Allen of the Fort McMurray fire department told reporters of a blaze that has prompted the biggest evacuation ever in Canada's Alberta province.

Fuel shortages and heavy traffic snarled the departure of residents from Fort McMurray, located in the northeastern part of the province of Alberta in the heart of Canada's oil sands region.

"The fire has resisted all suppression efforts."

Firefighters have not been able to bring the wildfire under control since it began on Sunday, and hot, dry winds forecast for later on Wednesday promised to complicate matters. Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said the military would deploy planes to help the stricken city if needed.

While major oil sands facilities were not in the fire's path, the blaze disrupted some operations. Royal Dutch Shell PLC said one of its oil sands mines was closed and another was in the process of being shut down. Suncor Energy Inc., whose oil sands operations are closest to the city, said it was reducing crude production.

The wildfire now covers about 18,500 acres, officials said. No injuries or deaths were reported.

Strong winds, high temperatures and low humidity will again create "explosive conditions" on Wednesday, said Bernie Schmitte, forestry manager in the nearby municipality of Wood Buffalo. Schmitte added that more resources are being assembled across Canada.

Images from the neighborhood of Beacon Hill in the city's southeast showed rows of charred house foundations, their upper stories burned to the ground, and blankets of white ash within. Officials said 80 percent of houses in the neighborhood, nearly 600 in total, were destroyed. REUTERS

Jay Z planning a "Lemonade" of his own

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

This will do little to quiet skeptics who think Beyonce and Jay Z's relationship troubles are all made up to boost album and concert ticket sales: The Tidal boss is reportedly planning his own album as a response to "Lemonade," Beyonce's latest work that seems to detail their near-split. "Jay is working on an album telling his side of things," a source tells Us Weekly. Let's just hope there isn't a song that includes, "Nah, but it really was some good hair" as a lyric.

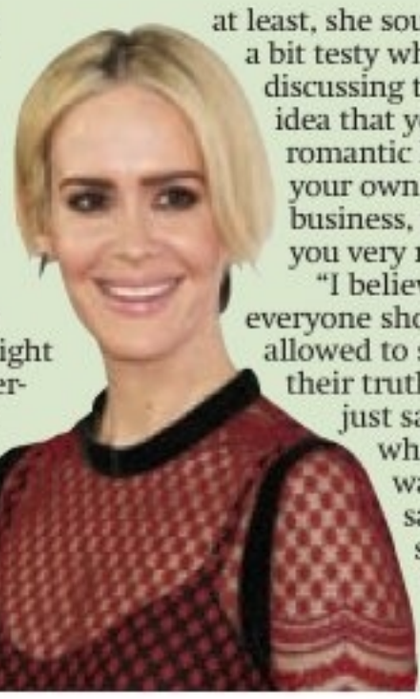
The Kardashians eyeing a Vegas residency

Honestly, this seems like a match made in tacky heaven. Kris Jenner is reportedly considering packing up the whole Kardashian team and sending them to Las Vegas for a residency at the Mirage called "Kardashians Live," according to In Touch. "It would be like a live version of their reality show but also a talk show with special musical guests," a source says. "Kris thinks fans will gladly fork over $50 per ticket for a live experience with her famously dysfunctional family." The sad part is, she's probably not wrong.

Rumer Willis won't take Photoshop "bullying"

Hollywood can be a cruel place, crueler than high school, even. Just ask Rumer Willis, who can't seem to catch a break from all the professional mean girls out there. Bruce and Demi's eldest daughter recently took to Instagram to lambast photographers Mark Williams and Sara Hirakawa for taking liberties with her appearance in a Vanity Fair photo shoot — altering her jaw to make it smaller, without her knowledge or consent. "The photographer Photoshopped my face to make my jaw smaller and I find it really offensive for anyone to try and change the way you look so drastically," Willis wrote. "I love the way I look and I won't support anyone who would feel a need to change the way I look to make me beautiful. Whether or not they realize it, it is a form of bullying, which I won't stand for." So there.

Sarah Paulson defends her romantic life



Sarah Paulson recently went public about her relationship with fellow actress Holland Taylor, and more than a few folks have been making light of the age difference between the two women. Well, Paulson ain't having it. Or at least, she sounds a bit testy when discussing the idea that your romantic life is your own damn business, thank you very much. "I believe that everyone should be allowed to speak their truth and just say what they want to say and show the world who they are," she tells the aggressively named NO TOFU magazine. "You should be able to love whomever you f—ing well please." To put it mildly. But Paulson is at least touched — if a bit baffled — by how much strangers care who she's dating. "There was so much celebration about my relationship," she says. "So much so that I thought, 'Jesus, did everyone just assume I was going to be alone forever with 500 cats?'" Hey, you said it, not us.

Christopher Walken and Maryann Plunkett (in the background) play performance artists who've damaged their now-grown children, played by Jason Bateman and Nicole Kidman. STARZ

Christopher Walken isn't actually that scary

Despite playing a bad father in "The Family Fang," the Oscar-winner is a pussycat in real life.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

Even Christopher Walken doesn't speak like Christopher Walken.

He may be tall and imposing, but the legendary actor is also soft-spoken and shy. When he talks he doesn't do what he does in movies: emphasizing odd syllables, pausing at random places, filling people with intense dread. When he's acting, it seems, even Christopher Walken is doing a Christopher Walken impersonation.

Walken is in NYC to speak about the indie dramedy "The Family Fang." The Oscar-winner plays one half of a famous performance artist couple (along with stage actress Maryann Plunkett) who've done a mental number on their kids, now grown and played by Nicole Kidman and Jason Bateman. (The latter also directed.) His character, Caleb, is no hero, but he's not a villain, as Walken has so often been typecast. Instead Caleb has rationalized the harm he does to others.

"There's that thing with certain people where they believe the breaking of eggs is necessary if you want to make an omelet," Walken tells us, quietly. "He steps on some toes because he thinks it's OK, because it's justified. Not a very nice man. I've never had kids, but I'd never want that guy for a father."

Walken has spoken often about his longing to play characters more like him: not just complex but reserved, down-to-earth. A rare case in which that did happen was Steven Spielberg's "Catch Me If You Can," in which he played Leonardo Di Caprio's haunted, tragic father. Walken was rewarded with an Oscar nomination. What happens more often, he says, is he'll sign up for a role only to find out it's been suddenly rewritten as wild and eccentric — what he's called "Walkenized."

GETTY IMAGES

"That happens to me a lot. I take a part and the writers decide they're going to make it better or something. I hate when that happens," he says. "You're in the costume fitting and they say to you, 'This is for the scene where you throw her out the window.' You say, 'What scene is that?' And she opens the script and there's a scene you never saw before."

That didn't happen with "The Family Fang," although Caleb is still more keyed-up than the actual Walken. Forced to talk about himself to a strange journalist in a tiny room, he's understandably withdrawn. He seems like what he really is: just a guy who, when not working in movies, lives a normal life in Connecticut. He rarely makes it to New York, although he confesses his dentist is still here.

Walken, 73, is also adamant about not being up with tech. He doesn't do social media, because he doesn't have a cellphone, and he doesn't even have a computer.

"I kind of just missed the boat," he says. "I've always been reluctant to do something any 7-year-old can do better than me. If I started using a computer right now, your 6-year-old nephew would run circles around me."

Not only that, he prefers to use his brain over gizmos. "I'm kind of an encyclopedia of old musicals," Walken says. "If I'm at dinner and somebody says, 'What's that show, what's that song?' usually I know. I can sing it. Then somebody will have a computer and they'll go bop-bop-bop, and a minute later they've got some recording of it. That's amazing."

WHERE TO EAT, DRINK & PLAY

Mother's Day events we can't wait for

Because brunch is basic.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

If you don't want to join the masses (and their mamas) for plain prix fixe on Sunday, we've rounded up five events we actually can't wait for to share with mom.

Harvard Square's Beat Brasserie has an evening of live music with a set by 3 Sudacas, a South American jazz fusion group, from 6 to 11 p.m. A special Mother's Day menu will also be offered, including crispy baby artichokes with Green Goddess dip and seared duck breast over kale and tart cherry risotto. (13 Brattle St., Cambridge. 617-499-0001, www.beatbrasserie.com)

If mom's preferred entertainment is of the culinary kind, Cafe Art-Science in Kendall Square is making the exception for the day, with brunch service from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., featuring a homey take on their typically grandiose gastronomy experience. On the menu: brioche French toast with preserves and bacon whipped cream and peekytoe crab salad with sesame tulle and caramelized miso. (650 E. Kendall St., Cambridge. 857-999-2193, www.cafeartscience.com)

Harvard's Arnold Arboretum in Jamaica Plain is celebrating their 108th Annual Lilac Sunday on Mother's Day, bringing 20 awesome local food trucks to the grounds for a snack bonanza from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The one-day event co-presented by Food Truck Festivals of America will feature local options to satiate all of mom's cravings: jerk chicken and curry stews from Jamaica Mi Hungry, farm-to-table salads from Heritage Food Truck, Bangladeshi halal from Chili Mango & Lime, and of course, sweet treats from Cameo Macaron. (arboretum.harvard.edu, 617-384-5209)

Southie's Coppersmith will feature an a la carte DIY bloody mary bar with jars of snacks, toppers and upgrades for your savory sipper. A $45 prix fixe gets Sunday guests a brunch inspired by Chef Jason Heard's Georgia upbringing — including sweet tea custard donuts, Blue Crab Benedict with Old Bay hollandaise and shrimp and grits with Allen Benton ham and charred pineapple. Attendees will also leave with a mini bottle of Grandma Clarice's Carolina Mustard, a fam recipe from Chef Heard's home to yours. (40 W. 3rd St., South Boston, 617-658-3452, www.coppersmithboston.com)

Central Square's Naco Taco is teaming up with Plant Nite for a DIY terrarium making party with master gardener Samantha McConaghy. Mom and her guests can learn to make Pinterest-worthy succulent arrangements in hanging glass orbs while snacking on Naco Taco's modern Mexican nosh — watermelon-jalapeno gazpacho and smoked tofus tacos, please. The $50 ticket includes supplies to make the plant you can't kill, but will still call mom for advice for. (297 Mass. Ave., Cambridge. 617-945-1548, www.nacocentral.com; tickets required from plantnite.com.)

Visualize Somerville 2, May 7 from 8 to 11 p.m. Tickets at goo.gl/Z7M6uf. PROVIDED

Artists and amateurs can climb the walls at Visualize Somerville 2

Imagine a mural with over 30 contributing artists at any given time — but artists who paint with their smartphones. Visualize Somerville 2 plans to make this futuristic art a reality, as guests will be able to draw with their phones and have projections cast on nearly every surrounding surface. Guests can hook up their phones to the provided Wi-Fi network and immediately be able to add to the projection-based art as they climb the walls at Brooklyn Boulders.

Event creator Jonathan MacLeod hopes that his Kickstarter-funded Visualize Somerville 2 will inspire guests to "reinvent" the often isolating ways that they conceive of their mobile devices.

"We have unlimited, unlocked potential for technology, and really it's just application at this point," MacLeod says. "That's one of the things we're trying to inspire in people, is that if you all put your heads together we can make beauty out of these things, we can make incredible things."

Last year's event saw about 700 guests, and this year Optexture — the audiovisual group that is hosting the event, of which MacLeod is the founder — has increased projection surfaces by 50 percent, meaning that about 80 percent of surfaces will be covered in projected art. There will also be oil-based projections, in which guests swirl oil paints in a dish, blending in the resulting projection.

Production for Visualize Somerville 2 has been underway for almost five months, and the event is funded entirely by a Kickstarter and ticket sales. "Somerville is hot bed of innovation," MacLeod says. "It's the perfect place to do this because there are just so many people that are on the bleeding edge of the new things that are coming out."

MacLeod also says that it is important that the interactive technology is easy to use

"I want anybody of any age, and I want this to be universally designed," he says. "It has to be as easy as possible." REENA KARASIN

8 New things to do at Walt Disney World

The House of Mouse has done some sprucing.

Fodor's Travel

The Amphicars are part of a massive expansion at Disney Springs. GETTY IMAGES

While you eagerly wait for Pandora — The World of Avatar at Animal Kingdom and lands devoted to "Star Wars" and "Toy Story" at Hollywood Studios, Disney's parks aren't standing still. This summer there are dozens of new restaurants, attractions and activities to merit a visit to Orlando.

Star Wars: A Galaxy Far Far Away

This show takes place on the stage right in front of the Chinese Theater at Hollywood Studios several times a day. Interspersed with projected scenes from all the movies, your favorite "Star Wars" heroes and villains appear including Darth Vader, C-3PO, Chewbacca and even BB-8.

Amphicars

The whimsical 1960s-era Amphicars — vintage cars that also float like boats — offer guided tours of Village Lake in front of Disney Springs' Boathouse restaurant all day long. The trips are not cheap at $125, but they are a unique way for three people to spend 20 minutes, as Amphicar rides are not offered anywhere else in the world. They are only at Disney Springs and, judging from the wait times, a hit.

Animal Kingdom Rides by Night

Opens Memorial Day weekend

Popular rides such as Kali River Rapids and Expedition Everest take on an entirely new feeling after dark. And at night, the animals of the Kilimanjaro Safaris (particularly those on the savanna) are much more active. You could see lions, African dogs, hyenas, hippos, elephants and gazelles ambling under a perpetually setting sun.

Harambe Market

Open now by day, Memorial Day weekend by night

By day, four walk-up windows serve African-inspired street food in a seafront African village that has been open since last year, with street entertainers and parties. But now the area comes alive at night as well, with the Harambe Wildlife Parti, a collection of drummers, singers, soccer players/performers and acrobats who will perform throughout the evening.

Frozen Ever After

Opens in June

Replacing the popular Maelstrom ride in Epcot's Norway Pavilion, this new ride will join Anna and Elsa in Arendelle for the Winter in Summer celebration, then travel to Elsa's Ice Palace and the North Mountain. All the original cast members returned to record the songs with new orchestrations especially for the ride.

Rivers of Light

Opens later this summer

One of Disney's most technically complex and inventive shows debuts later this summer at Animal Kingdom, bringing the Discovery Lagoon to life with dancing fountains, floating lanterns, animal films projected onto curtains of mist, music and other lively performances. The show uses Asian dance, music, shadowpuppets and songs to create a unique spectacle.

Royal Summerhaus

Opens June

Next door to Frozen Ever After in Epcot, the Norwegian village setting for the Royal Summerhaus was created after Imagineers traveled to Norway's Trondheim to find a suitable model. The authentic-looking village setting will set the scene for a meet-and-greet with Anna and Elsa inside the Royal Summerhaus itself, a cabin that was modeled on an actual country retreat for Norwegian royals.

Star Wars Launch Bay

Open Now

Already one of the most popular attractions in Disney's Hollywood Studios, Launch Bay contains an extensive exhibit of "Star Wars" replica props, vehicles and costumes; a place to play interactive video games; a theater where you can remember the magic of "Star Wars" from the beginning to "The Force Awakens"; and a character interaction area where you can meet and have your photo taken with Chewbacca or Kylo Ren.

Boston-based Major League Lacrosse now a major league operation

The Boston Cannons might offer the best pro sports deal in town.

RICH SLATE
sports@metro.us

Last weekend, Major League Lacrosse kicked off its 16th season of existence. Since 2004, the league's offices have been located in Brighton and the local team — the Boston Cannons — have returned to their roots as their home games will be back at historic Harvard Stadium in Allston.

It's been somewhat of an odyssey for the Cannons, whose home for the first three years (2001-2003) was Cawley Field in Lowell. After that, they played at BU's Nickerson Field for three seasons (2004-06) and then they went to Harvard. Last season, they played at Gillette Stadium but being closer to the city — not to mention easier access for the countless lacrosse fans that populate Metro West, the North Shore and South Shore — made it an easy choice to return.

"All the fans and people that I've talked to are really psyched about us being back at Harvard," noted Cannons first-year head coach Sean Quirk. "I know the players are excited. They enjoy playing for a Boston team. We're trying to make this a destination spot for the best players to come here."

The league itself has seen some up and downs as it started out with six franchises which lasted for five seasons before they expanded to 10 teams, which lasted only three seasons. It was scaled back to six clubs for three years before growing to eight teams for four more years. Now this year — with the addition of the Atlanta Blaze — MLL has nine teams.

That might not show it in a tangible way, but the sport of lacrosse is clearly growing by leaps and bounds. All you have to do is check out the sport's national popularity in terms of the youth, high school and college levels. As Quirk pointed out, the game itself is a combination of "hockey and basketball. It's fast-paced compared to other sports and kids are excited to play it since it is high tempo — plus there is contact."

Major League Lacrosse is in its 16th season of existence. GETTY IMAGES

At least timing-wise, MLL is set up for success since it plays the brunt of its schedule during a slow period in the sports calendar. The NBA and NHL playoffs will be over in June while MLL's regular season really starts to pick up at that point: the MLL All-Star Game is on July 9 and its postseason (four teams make it) includes semifinals on Aug.13 (at Fairfield, Connecticut, and Minnesota) and the final on Aug. 20 (in Atlanta). An associate athletic director at Endicott College in Beverly, Massachusetts, Quirk is also on the NCAA lacrosse committee. He was thrilled to see the NCAA men's lacrosse championships (Divisions 1-3) awarded to Gillette Stadium once again for 2017 and 2018. The Super Bowl of lacrosse was previously held in Foxboro in 2008, 2009 and 2012.

General manager Kevin Barney has been in charge of the Cannons for six years and he has seen first-hand how the sport has expanded on a grassroots level.

"I live in Stoughton and when I started with the Cannons. They didn't have youth lacrosse or a high school team, and now they have both," Barney told Metro. "You've seen that in numerous places where towns had partnered up with neighbors and now they're breaking off to form their own teams."

Boston opened with a 15-12 loss last Saturday at Charlotte and they return for their home opener on Saturday (7, Lacrosse Sports Network) vs. Atlanta (0-1). This season, for the first time, the Cannons will have a TV show on CSNNE called "Cannons Full Contact," dedicated to their lives both on and off the field. It debuted last week and it is an interesting look at these players, many of whom live elsewhere and commute to Boston for the practices and games on the weekends. Based locally as well, The Lacrosse Sports Network is another sign that the sport is taking off in a big way.

With free parking at Harvard and tickets that cost just $22 each — plus games that are high-scoring and typically end in roughly two hours, there is a lot to like about the product that MLL has put together.

"These are the best players in the world and there is plenty of action here for people that like sports," said Barney.

'Mmm, avocado ice cream'

Tom Brady's bizarre eating habits have been well chronicled. On Wednesday, Brady was peddling avocado ice cream on Facebook. The recipe for the ice cream can be found in TB12's nutritional cookbook, which is being sold for a cool $200. GETTY IMAGES

The post office address of said unit is Unit #18, 309 Emerson Street, S. Boston, MA 02127.

The unit is the same as that conveyed to Emma L. Padden by deed of Arnold Z. Mason dated August 17, 1982, recorded with Suffolk County Registry of Deeds, Book 10032, Page 285, to which was attached a copy of a portion of the plans attached to said Master Deed bearing the verified statement of a registered land surveyor certifying that it shows the unit designation of the unit hereby conveyed and of immediately adjoining units and that it fully and accurately depicts the layout of the Unit, its location, dimensions, approximate area, main entrance and immediate common areas to which it access, as built.

Said unit is conveyed subject to and together with all covenants, easements, and restrictions of record, including the following restrictions on use:
1. No Unit shall be used for more than solely residential purposes by not more than one family nor by more than two unrelated persons;

2. No Unit shall be used or maintained in a manner contrary to or inconsistent with the by-laws of the Eaton Condominium, as set forth in the declaration of the Eaton Condominium Trust, recorded with the said registry of Deeds, Book 9909, Page 64, as the same now exists or as may be amended as therein set forth;

3. No alteration shall be made to the Unit which shall or may alter the structural integrity of the Condominium Building or Common Areas and Facilities, and each Unit shall be maintained to meet the minimal requirements set forth in said By-Laws, as now exists or as may hereafter be promulgated as therein set forth.

4. No pets, use or utilization of the herein conveyed Unit shall be allowed or made except in strict conformity with the terms and provisions of said Chapter 183A, said Master Deed and Condominium Trust, and the By-Laws therein. And the herein conveyed shall be subject to the 'Right of First Refusal' for sales and rentals as specified in said Master Deed, By-Laws and said Condominium Trust; and

5. Such taxes attributable to said Unit for the current fiscal as are not due and payable. The above restrictions as for the benefit of all the Unit Owners of said Condominium, and shall be enforceable as set forth in said condominium Trust, and shall be subject to the provisions set forth therein.

For mortgagor's(s') title see deed recorded with Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 39216, Page 339.

These premises will be sold and conveyed subject to and with the benefit of all rights, rights of way, restrictions, easements, covenants, liens or claims in the nature of liens, improvements, public assessments, any and all unpaid taxes, tax titles, tax liens, water and sewer liens and any other municipal assessments or liens or existing encumbrances of record which are in force and are applicable, having priority over said mortgage, whether or not reference to such restrictions, easements, improvements, liens or encumbrances is made in the deed.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars by certified or bank check will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale. The balance is to be paid by certified or bank check at Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 150 California Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02458, or by mail to P.O. Aries Balance, integrity and proper incentives will help you get your way. Take a moment to enjoy what you have and be grateful for it. Don't get dragged into someone else's melodrama.

Taurus Represent who you are and what you plan to do in a unique manner. A debate with someone from a different background is best handled with diplomacy.

Gemini A set budget will help you avoid unnecessary purchases and financial loss. Don't feel obliged to give money to someone looking for a handout. Offer suggestions, nothing more.

Cancer Your versatility will surprise friends and family. Consistency has always been your modus operandi, but today, taking a unique position or path will bring stellar results.

Leo You will need to compromise if you want to get things done. A positive but passionate approach that offers incentives will help you get others to see things your way.

Virgo It's a good day to set the stage, voice your opinion or make travel plans. Whatever you touch will turn to gold, as long as you avoid senseless arguments and no-win situations.

Libra Do whatever it takes to save money. Make changes at home that will please the ones you love. Getting along and keeping the peace will give you time to consider your options.

Scorpio Draw interest by offering a different perspective on a situation at home. Your concerns and suggestions will qualify your position and help you gain approval.

Sagittarius You can only do so much. Put a limit on your spending and time. You'll be given false information that could lead you astray. Do your own research.

Capricorn Home should be your first concern. Supplying comforts and security is important, but don't jeopardize your financial position. Honesty and affordable plans will bring good results.

Aquarius Accept the inevitable and make whatever you are faced with work to your advantage. Don't be swayed by someone looking out for his or her own interests.

Pisces Refuse to let the desires of others deter you from doing your own thing. Someone from your past will give you the insight you need to move forward. Trust in yourself. EUGENIA LAST
